

ABSTRACT

The golf ball having either a smooth or dimpled surface is disclosed including a sphere with peripheral channels spaced and intersected at distances on the surface, with part of the air flow on the front over-pressure area communicating with the rear depression of the ball in its forward movement, facilitating aerodynamic air circulation through it, resulting in reduced resistance, thereby facilitating rotation and lift, enhancing the advance of the ball.